INTRO

Nestled at the confluence of the Bay of Bengal and the Andaman Sea, the Andaman and Nicobar Islands stand as a unique union territory of India, boasting a total of 571 islands, 37 of which are inhabited. Situated approximately 150 kilometers north of Aceh, Indonesia, this archipelago is separated from Thailand and Myanmar by the vast expanse of the Andaman Sea. The Andaman Islands, a group exceeding 300 in number, encompass significant clusters such as North, Middle, and South Andaman, collectively referred to as Great Andaman. Other notable isles include Landfall Island, Interview Island, the Sentinel Islands, Ritchie's Archipelago, and Rutland Island. In the southern reaches, Little Andaman is demarcated from the Nicobar Islands by the Ten Degree Channel, spanning a width of around 90 miles (145 km).

The Nicobar Islands, comprising 19 islands, exhibit their own distinctive charm. Car Nicobar in the north, along with Camorta, Katchall, and Nancowry at the heart of the chain, and the sprawling Great Nicobar in the south, all contribute to the rich tapestry of this territory. Remarkably, the Ten Degree Channel separates Little Andaman from the Nicobar Islands, a channel approximately 90 miles wide. Adding to the geographical allure, the northwestern tip of Sumatra, Indonesia, lies about 90 miles southwest of Great Nicobar, creating a fascinating blend of diverse landscapes and seascapes in this tropical haven.
